In September 2022, the UK Health Security Agency made a controversial or fabulous announcement, depending on which side of the fence you're on, that it would no longer offer the Covid-19 vaccine to healthy 5 to 11-year-old children.

This decision was based on official data from the Office for National Statistics, which revealed a 22% increase in deaths among children aged 5 to 9 since the NHS had begun vaccinating children aged 5-11 in April 2022.

But the issue of child deaths from Covid-19 was not unique to the UK. Across Europe, concerns should have been growing about the safety and efficacy of Covid-19 vaccines for children.

Because by the end of 2022, excess deaths among children had increased by a shocking 1,580%.

Prior to the approval of the Covid-19 vaccine for children aged 12 to 15, the number of excess deaths among children in Europe was non-existent.

According to EuroMOMO, in the first 21 weeks of 2021, there were 346 fewer deaths than expected, meaning there were minus-346 or 0 excess deaths.

However, as soon as the European Medicines Agency (EMA) extended the emergency use authorisation of the Pfizer Covid-19 injection to 12 to 15-year-olds in week 22 of 2021, the number of excess deaths began to rise, significantly.

These figures raise serious questions about why experimental gene therapy “vaccines” were pushed on children when the alleged Covid-19 virus was posing no risk to them.

This increase in excess deaths was of course not publicised in the mainstream media. But came as no surprise to those who were already aware of the heavily censored damage that Covid-19 vaccination was doing to adults.

If it had been publicised, instead of being swept under the carpet, it would have sparked widespread concern among parents who had chosen to vaccinate their children due to believing everything they are told by a man, in a suit, on the television.

It would have also prevented other parents from forcing their children to get a vaccine they simply did not, and do not need, when the European Medicines Agency (EMA) extended the emergency use authorisation of the Pfizer Covid-19 injection for use in 5 to 11-year-old children just a few months later.

News 25/11/2021

EMA's human medicines committee (CHMP) has recommended granting an extension of indication for the COVID-19 vaccine Comirnaty to include use in children aged 5 to 11. The vaccine, developed by BioNTech and Pfizer, is already approved for use in adults and children aged 12 and above.

This may have, prevented the shocking increase in excess deaths that were recorded among children in Europe up to the end of 2022.

Because the figures show that there were 466 fewer deaths than expected among children in Europe throughout the whole of 2020 at the height of the alleged pandemic.

However, the pandemic didn't really hit Europe until around March 2020.

This makes the EMA's decision to jab children look even worse, as 616 fewer deaths were recorded among children at the height of the alleged pandemic.

In fact, the figures prove that children were in better shape than ever, and the alleged pandemic was not affecting them in any significant way.

Unfortunately, following the emergency approval of the Covid vaccine for children, a staggering 1,953 excess deaths were recorded between week 22 of 2021 and week 52 of 2022.

For comparison, there were 334 excess deaths recorded among children between week 22 and week 52 of 2019. Unfortunately, when we couple this figure with child deaths recorded in 2020, we discover there were 132 fewer deaths than expected among children aged 0-14 across Europe.

The figures and correlation are clear:

The EMA approval of the Covid-19 vaccine for children caused a significant increase in excess deaths across Europe following a long period of children suffering far fewer deaths than expected prior to the approval.

Thankfully, the increase in deaths was enough to convince the UK Government that all healthy 5 to 11-year-olds should not be offered a Covid-19 vaccine. But only after they had realised it was killing children.

In September 2022, the UK Health Security Agency announced that it would no longer offer the Covid-19 vaccine to healthy children aged 5 to 11.

According to an article published in The Guardian, “The decision to reduce the number of children who are offered Covid jabs has prompted outcry from parent groups and academics.”

But this decision came after official data from the Office for National Statistics (ONS) revealed that deaths among children aged 5 to 9 had increased by 22% compared to the previous two years since the NHS began vaccinating children aged 5-11 on April 4, 2022.

NHS rolls out COVID vaccine to five million 5 to 11 year olds

4 April 2022

Children and young people

Coronavirus

The NHS will start vaccinating children aged 5-11 today, as the biggest and most successful vaccination drive in health service history moves to the next phase.

Almost five million children in this age group are eligible for two doses of the vaccine following updated JCVI guidance, which recommended children can benefit from non-urgent offer of the vaccine.

With some schools having already broken up for the Easter break, hundreds of sites will be providing vaccinations from today with more sites coming online throughout the week.

At the time, Dr. Nikki Kanani, GP and Deputy Lead for the NHS COVID-19 vaccination program, encouraged parents to get their children vaccinated at the earliest opportunity, stating that the vaccine was safe and effective. She even mentioned that her 10-year-old daughter would be getting the vaccine that week.

Dr Nikki Kanani, GP and Deputy Lead for the NHS COVID-19 vaccination programme, said: "NHS staff continue to work hard across the country to deliver the COVID vaccine to all eligible groups and this group of 5 to 11s are the latest to start receiving theirs, helping to protect against potential future waves of COVID.

"Local vaccine sites are making it as easy as possible for families, and a less daunting experience for youngsters, by offering things like games and therapy dogs, and it's great to see lots of 5 to 11s already booked in.

"The vaccine is safe and effective – my 10-year old daughter will be getting hers this week – and I'd encourage all parents to read the information and consider booking their child in for a vaccination at the earliest opportunity."

Source

It is unclear whether the NHS and Dr. Kanani still stand by their claims, now that the UKHSA has decided to stop offering the vaccine to 5 to 11-year-olds.

Another ONS report also reveals that unvaccinated children aged 10 to 14 had a Covid-19 mortality rate of 0.31 per 100,000 person-years between January 2021 and May 2022.

However, children who had received one dose of the vaccine had a mortality rate of 3.24, while those who had received three doses had a mortality rate of 41.29 per 100,000 person-years.

This revealed that unvaccinated children were less likely to die of Covid-19 than vaccinated children. Meaning the real-world effectiveness of Pfizer's Covid-19 vaccine against death among children was also negative during the period between January 2021 and May 2022.

Partly vaccinated children were 11 times or 966.67% more likely to die of Covid-19 than unvaccinated children, while triple vaccinated children were 137.3 times or 13,633.33% more likely to die of Covid-19 than unvaccinated children.

The claimed 95% effectiveness against death made by Pfizer was nowhere near achieved. In fact it was an outright lie.

Formula:

$\text{Unvaccinated Death Rate} - \text{Vaccinated Death Rate}$

$\text{Unvaccinated Death Rate} \times 100 =$

$\text{Vaccine Effectiveness against Death}$

Furthermore, the all-cause mortality rate among unvaccinated children was 6.39 per 100,000 person-years. It was slightly higher at 6.48 among partly vaccinated children, but increased significantly to 97.28 among double-vaccinated children and a shocking 289.02 per 100,000 person-years among triple-vaccinated children.

England, Children aged 10 to 14, for period 1st Jan 2021 to 31st May 2022

Thus, according to official UK Government data, double-vaccinated children were 1422% or 15.22 times more likely to die of any cause than unvaccinated children, while triple-vaccinated children were 4423% or 45.23 times more likely to die of any cause than unvaccinated children.

It is truly unbelievable that children have been subjected to experimental gene therapy injections that we are told are vaccines, especially when official Government figures prove the alleged Covid-19 virus was posing no risk to the whatsoever.

The cost of administering experimental vaccines to children is evident in the excess deaths that have been recorded since their approval.

The decision to jab children with an experimental mRNA gene therapy raises serious questions about the motives of Governments, NGOs, Medicine Regulators, and tax-payer-funded scientists and doctors.

It is time for those in power to take responsibility for the harm that has been done to children and to reconsider their approach to public health. Children deserve better than to be treated as guinea pigs in a global experiment.

The numbers don't lie.
